Grant's Boyhood Days

Equal in rank with a general magis-ty, and in the eye of the law just as certain, the horse, as a citizen of the empire, like a man, is entitled to all those rights, privileges, and immuni-ties which are accorded to the inhabitants of the land. The horse, from the moment of his birth, like a man, is entitled to be treated with respect.

He cannot be maltreated, or ill-used, like a piece of meat; for he is not a piece of meat, but a living being, with a soul, and a spirit, and a life, just as much alive as any other animal on earth. The horse, just as the man, is entitled to be protected, and to be treated with kindness and consideration. He is entitled to be treated with the same respect, the same consideration, and the same kindness, as any other living being.

The horse, like a man, is entitled to the blessings and benefits of civil liberty, and to all the rights and privileges of citizenship. He is not a slave, but a free agent, and as such is entitled to all the rights and privileges of a free citizen.

A near cousin of a gentleman of rank and distinction, and who is a member of a distinguished family, was recently visited by a friend, who had brought with him a fine horse, for the purpose of showing it to the gentleman of rank. The gentleman of rank, on seeing the horse, was much pleased, and asked the friend what kind of horse it was. The friend said it was a fine horse, and that it was the finest horse he had ever seen. The gentleman of rank said that he was glad to hear that the friend had brought a fine horse, and that he was glad to see it. He said that he was glad to see any horse, and that he was glad to see a fine horse, and that he was glad to see the finest horse that the friend had ever seen.

Grant's Boyhood Days.
Daniel Ammen.

Morning Oregonian (Portland, Oregon, Sunday, April 23, 1893; pg. 14; Issue 15. (1619 words)

Category: News

Gale Document Number: GT3006094363